

SENATOR GREGG FIGHTS TO FULLY FUND SPECIAL EDUCATION

When the federal government enacted the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) in 1975, it promised to fund 40 percent of the cost of special education. IDEA requires local schools to provide a free and adequate public education for special needs students. However, the major burden for funding special education costs remains on state governments.

Before Senator Gregg began pressing for change, the federal government's share of special education costs was roughly 7 percent. This coming year—as a result of Senator Gregg's work—the federal share is projected to be at least 20 percent. For New Hampshire, this means the state will likely see an increase of more than $35 million from the 1996 amount. These additional funds have significantly helped defray local costs of providing special education services.

Because Senator Gregg is concerned about local schools and communities as they continue to struggle with fulfilling IDEA requirements without the promised resources, he will continue his efforts to see that IDEA receives greater funding through the framework of a balanced budget.

Senator Gregg will continue to use his positions on the Committees on Appropriations and Budget, and as the Chairman of the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions to continue to work towards full funding of special education.

NH's Share of Special Education dollars is up over $35 million or 348 percent since 1996, and 477 percent since Senator Gregg was first elected.
